Sarah Bernhardt.

During her recent engagement at the Baldwin Theatre Sarah Bernhardt and the measures of her skill as an actress, have been viewed and discussed from every conceivable point of view, the verdict being invariably an unreserved acknowledgment that she has few, if any equals, and no superior in her chosen profession. Not the least remarkable feature of the fortnight's engagement, is the fact that a French star, supported by a French company, and playing exclusively in the French language to American audiences, should draw a larger amount of money to the Baldwin Theatre than was ever before drawn there by any other company during an equal length of time.

Over $45,000 was taken in at the box office in two weeks. In spite of the woman's stage life, and the newspaper filth of two continents heaped upon her, she stands forth today as the greatest genius now on the stage and has the world at her feet.

BEGINNING BUSINESS.

A New Departure in Nevada Money Matters.

By July 1st the Nevada-California Loan and Investment Company will open their books for business. The country East of the mountains has been at a great disadvantage heretofore in the matter of securing loans among the class of citizens who have desired to improve their lands, and it will be in this that the country will be benefited. A glance at the list of incorporators will be proof to anyone that it will not be mismanaged. Men who have handled their own affairs as prudently as have many of their number will never give their names to a doubtful project. The record of H. M. Yerrington, D. L. Bliss, J. B. Overton, D. A. Bender and G. W. Mapes is brilliant in the financial history of the Coast, while the names of Manning, Martin Lowell and Beck are synonymous with business judgment and commercial judgment and business integrity. The President, Hon. Evan Williams, is a leading spirit in the revival of mining and milling of the Comstock ores, and his prudent and sagacious methods have made millions of dollars from ores formerly thrown out as not worth hoisting. The Vice-President and manager, Mr. Chas. T. Bender, has for 13 years been the acting officer in the First National Bank of Reno, conducting its business from a small beginning up to the greatest prosperity and importance. His skill and intelligence, combined with habits of industry and with the fidelity so necessary to success as a banker have given him the confidence of the entire Coast. The Secretary, Gen. C. S. Preble, is thoroughly conversant with the geography and resources of the Great Basin, having been in every part of it in his capacity of Deputy United States Surveyor and having been for four years State Surveyor General. The Trustees are men of experience, with an intimate knowledge of values and with the business pride natural to their stations. The company expects to do what it can to place a part of the vast accumulation of money lying stagnant in the business circles in circulation among the farmers and industrious settlers of this region.—Gazette.

THE SHAKE.

AN EARTHQUAKE TREMOR ROLLS OVER NEVADA.

Carson Considerably Vibrated.—The Experiences of Various People.

Yesterday morning at quarter of three o'clock exactly, a strong shock of earthquake passed through Nevada and was especially pronounced in this city. The line of the shock seemed at the time to those who were awake, to be from North to South although there is considerable evidence to show that it was rotary.

Within five minutes after the shock THE STREETS WERE FILLED WITH PEOPLE

Some badly frightened, some considerably amused and all chattering volubly over the occurrence, with each man relating his own personal experience. After the first shock which lasted for several seconds, there were two more slight tremors. Many people were so worried over the matter that they declined to go to bed again.

THE DAMAGE.

All of the merchants have more or less damage to report by the falling of fragile wares. Every store in the city lost from $20 to $30 on broken crockery and glass ware, and in private families pictures were shaken from the walls and more or less damage done.

Ex-Governor Adam's house was very badly wrecked, pictures and plaster fell from the walls and the place considerably littered up. Shultz's stone building was probably the worst damaged in town and the rear wall will probably be taken down. The Rieckle building was cracked in several places.

The APPEAL office was cracked in front and pictures and plastering fell in the editorial room. Dozens of buildings all over the city are slightly cracked. Some estimate the damage at $1,000 and some as high as $5,000. It is certain however that no one individual was badly damaged.

The buildings which were more or less damaged, or whose contents were damaged, are: E. B. Rail's, Bullion & Exchange Bank, Muller Schmitt's, Ormsby House, Chedio's grocery and Schneider's Bakery. The plaster fell in the U. S. Mint.

AT THE HOT SPRINGS.

Shaw's Springs were badly effected by the shock and the water lowered six inches. It was reported yesterday that the Springs were ruined, a report which everybody hopes is not true.

Warden McCullough at the State Prison says that the hot springs there raised six inches and the additional flow of water was white with soda and sulphur.

Cagwin's artesian well has increased its flow.

INCIDENTS.

Oliver Roberts the night watchman of the State Capitol, supposed burglars were trying to break in the doors, rushed around the place flourishing a big six-shooter. Deputy State Controller Holbrook was in bed in the rear of the office and Roberts says that he heard him kicking frantically at the door, begging to be let out.

Daugherty, the gardner, sprang out of bed and rushed about the Capitol grounds in his night clothes. It was some time before he could be persuaded to dress himself.

A good many other people ran out of their houses in their night clothes.

Tim Dempsey relates some very queer experiences.

Judge Edwards says that his horse screamed like a human being.

Numbers of people were shaken out of bed.

In the livery stables the horses were all panic stricken and attempted to get away, neighing and screaming in terror.

Cows bellowed for half an hour afterwards, the chickens kept up an incessant squalling, and the dogs bayed dismally.

Kaiser's son, of the Ormsby House on feeling the shock jumped out of bed and dashing into the center of the room grabbed a revolver and leveled it in the direction of the sound. There happened to be a looking glass in front of him and it being moonlight he saw his figure reflected. Thinking it a burglar with the drop on him, he dropped his pistol and threw up his hands.

James Rycraft was on the street rushing for a doctor when the shock threw him face forward to the ground.

DIRECTION OF THE SHOCK.

Every man seems to have a different theory as to the direction of the shock.

In the Capitol all clocks with pendulums swinging East and West stopped at 2:45, while those with pendulums vibrating North and South were not disturbed. In other places, however, the result was exactly the reverse.

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE.

At the writer's place pans of milk were shaken in a way that indicated that the shock was rotary.

A buggy in the barn was dashed across the floor against the side of the barn and the shafts of a cart on the outside were plowed along the ground in a South-westerly direction.

When the shock came the writer was asleep and as he rose up it seemed as if a number of people had entered the house and were engaged in smashing up everything inside.

A party not far from the writer at the time, alleges that he yelled out, "Hay there! what's the matter with yer?" and danced about the room like an escape from the Reno Asylum.

PARTIES WHO WERE NOT ALARMED.

In the morning there were lots of people who insisted that "it did not frighten them in the least."

This sort of people grew beautifully less by noon, as people began to make more candid admissions of their experiences.

It soon became the general opinion that the man who denied being frightened was a liar or drunk.

No one who was suddenly awakened by the shock but felt a vague sense of terror as if something terrible had happened or was about to.

IN DOUGLAS COUNTY.

Genoa was badly shaken up. A new brick building belonging to a Mr. Boyd, just on the eve of completion, will have to be taken down and rebuilt.

The County Clerk stated that his house was so twisted that his water pipes were useless.

A fissure in the ground opened near Cradlebaugh's bridge, some say fifty feet deep, and mud and hot water spouted out for half an hour and then abated.

THE STATE MONEY SHAKEN UP.

When State Treasurer Tuffy opened the State safe in the morning a terrible sight met his eyes. The stacks of coin had all been thrown down. The twenties had fallen gracefully and evenly. The tens had been thrown further and the fives were dashed up against the safe's walls and scattered in every direction. A pile of $60,000 fell in a fueline toward the APPEAL office, but of course did not get that far.

WELLINGTON STEWART'S STORY.

Wellington Stewart, the Attorney was on his ranch in Washoe and was up looking after some stock that had broken into his inclosure. He says the house rocked East and West as he stood on the stoop and then everything vibrated up and down. Everybody who was awake heard a loud rumbling like a heavy train of cars thundering down a grade. The undefinable roar of thunder seemed everywhere, in the ground and in the air and the instant it stopped came the shock.

Another one is expected soon, on the grounds that the weather is of a pronounced earthquaky character.

Buck Taylor Breaks His Leg.

LONDON, June 2.—During the performance of the Wild West show yesterday Buck Taylor's horse came into collision with a horse, ridden by Della Farrell going in the opposite direction. Miss Farrell's horse's shoulder caught Buck's right leg, and throwing him back, twisted the limb, breaking it short off at the middle of the thigh bone. There were about 12,000 people in the grand stand, and great excitement ensued as Buck was seen to throw up his arms, reel in the saddle, give a terrific yell, and fall headlong to the earth among the flying hoofs of the horses. The performance was at once stopped, surgeons sent for, a stretcher procured and Buck taken to the West London Hospital.
